Objectives

The objectives of the Small & Medium Enterprises for Labour or SME 4 Labour are to support and promote the values and principles of the Labour Party in order to engage the small & medium enterprise businesses community in Britain.

In pursuing these aims, the Group shall:

- Promote the values and principles of the Labour Party to the small & medium enterprise businesses community in Britain
- Ensure the Labour Party, at all levels, are made aware of the strengths, contributions and needs of the small & medium enterprise businesses community in Britain in order to engage and promote the profile of the small & medium enterprise businesses community in Britain
- Engage the small & medium enterprise businesses community in actively participating in the political and democratic processes and structures of the Labour Party at the local, regional, national and European levels by the encouragement of membership and support of the Labour Party
- Forge international links with similar organisations in Europe and elsewhere in order to enhance the work of Small & Medium Enterprises for Labour
- Encourage more small & medium enterprise business people to become Labour Party political representatives at the local, regional, national and European levels
- To encourage more small & medium enterprise business people to take an active part in political and public life and to bring the values of the Labour Party into this work and service
- To ensure that all activities we carry out offers the equality of opportunity to all sections of the small & medium enterprise businesses community, in particular women, people with disabilities and those sections within our small & medium enterprise businesses communities who face particular disadvantages and exclusion.

Ibrahim Dogus
Chair of SME4Labour

"Firstly, thank you for taking your time to have a look at what we do. We began the SME4Labour group because we firmly believe that small businesses play a crucial part in British society and have a lot to contribute to progressive politics. I am a small business owner and at the same time a proud Labour Party member. Despite what some people think, these two things go hand in hand.

I began my working life as a waiter. Over time, I worked my way up to become a manager and in 2003, I set up my own restaurant. I now run five restaurants across London and employ 60 people. There seems to be an idea that the Labour Party is anti-business. In my opinion this could not be further from the truth. The Labour Party deeply values the role that small businesses play in communities, I believe small businesses and communities are intrinsically linked. Small businesses are the life blood of our communities, as most businesses create jobs and reinvest in their communities. I have personally borne witness to how much Labour MPs place value in the businesses in their constituencies. However, we can't say the same about the party in power. This party is one that sides with the bigger businesses and who typically neglect communities.

Labour speaks up for people who don't have a voice, So we're are going to take it upon ourselves to speak up for the companies that don't have big marketing budgets, that don't put their money in tax havens, that don't off-shore jobs and that don't believe in zero-hour contracts. We will support businesses that believe in Labour values. So we need to get away from this anti-business view and start saying, as a party, how much we need SMEs, because we as SMEs, need Labour. We are living under a government that does not respect small businesses or the working people. The Labour Party is the party of workers, people who are up at the crack of dawn to see through a hard day's work. The previous Labour Government was a friend to small businesses; I strongly believe it is time we had a party like that in No. 10 once again.

Small firms account for 99.3 per cent of all private sector businesses in the UK. They provide nearly half of all private sector jobs and a third of the private sector's turnover. Small and medium sized businesses employed 15.6 million people and had a combined turnover of £1.8 trillion last year. No political party which is serious about forming the next government can ignore small businesses.

At SME4Labour we will be supporting the Labour Party, and supporting those small businesses, entrepreneurs and the self-employed who contribute so much to their communities and who find themselves, far too often, in precarious situations. Whether that is because of complex tax systems and regulations, or competition from large businesses who can get away with breaking the rules, small businesses need our help.

So, please, let us come together and invest in our communities, our innovators and our future prosperity.

Thank you."

Rt Hon Jeremy Corbyn

Leader of the Labour Party and MP for Islington North

"The formation of this group within the Labour Party is a very important step and I look forward to working with you. SME 4 Labour is an important way in which we can ensure good employment practices and growth in the small and medium business sector. I am grateful to SME 4 Labour and the efforts it makes to engage and to co-operate with small businesses, and wish it all the best for the future."

Tom Watson

Deputy Leader of the Labour Party and MP for West Bromwich East

"SME 4 Labour is a vital component of the conversation that the Labour Party will have with voters between now and the 2020 election. More than five million small and medium enterprises in Britain employ over 15 million people, and are the productive frontier of our future economy. Clear, strong and close relations between our party's policy makers and SMEs are critical, and SME 4 Labour is playing a strong and innovative role in providing that platform."

Support Messages

Sonny Leong
Co-chair of SME4Labour

"SMEs are the source of a lot of people's reliable livelihoods but also the dominant driver for growth and creativity in our economy. Every national business success

- Amstrad; Virgin; Innocent; Ella's Kitchen – began life as a small business.

Yet start-ups face a huge amount of challenges. For instance 7 out of 10 don't make it through their third year due to lack of working capital, business planning and entrepreneurial skills. This is an area where an active government can use its convening power to give support to ensure that startups can fulfil their potential.

An issue Tom Watson addressed very effectively was how we support microbusiness – those that consist of less than 10 people. They can be a source of great innovation and creativity, but can also be a very insecure experience as you fight to make a big enough impact to pay the rent or try to save for a mortgage. There is a lot Labour can do to support micro-businesses like this to make their task a little easier.

The Labour values of partnership, of internationalism and of the concept of a common endeavour are very much of benefit to business and to working people of all backgrounds who want make the most of their talents and potential. That, for me, is what Labour is all about – bringing each of us a life of success, by building a successful society, together."

Martin Howe
SME 4 Labour Executive Committee Member

"In the brave new world where we face a soft or hard Brexit, where the US President elect is unpredictable and where future trading markets are unclear, there is a critical need for SMEs to have a strong voice in the thinking and policies of the Labour Party.

Businesses are rocked by the scourge of uncertainty and are seriously hampered by a disorganised government that has taken a leap in the dark with no plan and no torch to show us the way ahead. Labour does shine a light for SMEs and SME4Labour will continue to work closely with the Party to ensure that the challenges we all face are not only quickly identified but are also resolved with practical solutions.

We will campaign for fair financial deals for SMEs, for safe working conditions and for fair rights for workers. The recent exposure of sharp bank practices putting their own commercial interests before the interests of us as SME customers is a scandal. We will campaign for full and proper compensation for businesses damaged by unacceptable banking practices that have loaded SMEs with unfair excessive charges and inappropriate impenetrable financial products that have tipped many good businesses over the edge with enormous consequential losses.

SME4Labour will not stand idly by whilst City slickers continue to grow fat on the suffering of SMEs. We will hold all in authority to account."

John McDonnell
MP Shadow Chancellor

"SME 4 Labour provides the Labour Party with a direct link to many small and medium enterprises, helping us to develop the policies needed to support this key sector of our economy.

Thanks to the work of SME 4 Labour our party has a full appreciation of the immense contribution SMEs make to our economy and the role they could play in rebuilding and transforming our economy under a Labour Government."

Iain McNicol

General Secretary of the Labour Party

"Small and medium-sized enterprises play a vital role in our economy. As Labour set's out our policy platform ahead of the next election we will make sure small and medium-sized enterprises, micro businesses, start-ups and the self-employed are at the heart of our economy and business policies. SMEs represent enterprise, innovation and localism- values that are at the core of the Labour Party - and as such I'm delighted to offer support to SME 4 Labour."

Diane Abbott

Shadow Home Secretary and MP for Hackney North and Stoke Newington

"Small and Medium Enterprises are critically important for the strength and development of the British economy, and I am delighted to give my support to SME 4 Labour as a crucial bridge between business communities and the Labour Party. SMEs provide a great deal of employment and are at the forefront of business innovation. It is imperative that the Labour party engages with and listens to these groups when considering policy, thereby harnessing their innovative spirit of and strengthening our policies towards creating a fairer and more prosperous society."

Rt Hon Yvette CooperMP for Normanton, Pontefract and Castleford

"From the hairdressers, restaurants and corner shops which are part of our everyday lives to the exciting new tech start-ups and small online microbusinesses SMEs are the backbone of the British economy.

If Labour are to win power again we have to have the support of those who work in - and run - small and medium enterprise. That's why SME for Labour is so important in making sure our Party truly understands how the real working world is changing in the new digital age, and how we can create policies which can support and help this important sector flourish"

Support Messages

Angela Eagle
MP for Wallasey

"The dynamism of small and medium sized businesses is critical to the success of the UK economy. Representing over 99% of UK businesses, they provide 60% of private sector jobs and account for almost 50% of all private sector turnover. "I would like to congratulate SME 4 Labour on the vital work they do to help strengthen relationships between the Labour Party and SMEs. Labour must be a champion for SMEs and self-employed businesses, particularly given the current economic uncertainty following Brexit, and future threats to the existing workforce caused by automation and digital disruption. "I look forward to working closely with SME 4 Labour over the year ahead, and contributing to the debate around the future of the economy and the workforce in our changing world."

Stephen Kinnock
MP for Aberavon

"SMEs are the backbone of the backbone of our economy: employing around half the private sector workforce, making up 99% of British businesses, and accounting for over a third of our national turnover.

Small business-owners and their staff know the value of hard work as much as anyone else and Labour must embrace them; placing them at the heart of our quest to fix our economy, and build a new kind of growth. We won't navigate the uncertainties of Brexit, rebalance our economy, end our dangerous reliance upon financial services, close our trade deficit and spark a manufacturing renaissance on our own. That is why Labour must work in partnership with SMEs to build towards a new kind of growth, and a better

Britain. The Labour party is a movement with social justice at its heart, and without small businesses and their help, we will never be able to create the good society.

Small businesses are the engine which can ensure that Labour is a living, breathing and active party, in touch with all the concerns and lives of communities across our country, and engaged with the issues of the shop floor, of management and the board room.

Over the past few years, SME4Labour have helped connect the party with businesses, building relationships with Trade Unions, the workforce and management. This is key if we are to build a partnership based approach to rebuilding our economy, our society and our movement.

Through uncertain times, small businesses will be there. They will struggle, but with the resilience that characterises so many, they will survive. But make no mistake, without an engaged Labour party, the voice of small business may be drowned out as we look for a post-Brexit settlement by that of big business and the Tory backbenches.

SME 4 Labour play a vital role in making that happen, and I know they will continue to do so as we look to ensure a balanced Brexit, a better Britain and a new kind of growth."

Jonathan Ashworth
MP for Leicester South

"SMEs represent the entrepreneurial spirit of Britain at its best, making a vital contribution to the UK. As Britain looks to a future outside of the European Union, the role of our home-grown businesses will become ever more important in supporting long-term prospects for growth, job creation and innovation in our economy.

"Small and Medium Enterprises are the lifeblood of the British economy. In my own constituency of Leicester South, and across the country, they are the corner shops that we rely on, and the start-ups that drive us forward. The work that SME 4 Labour does is vital. It's only by reaching out to the 14.4 million people who work for small and medium enterprises that Labour will ever be returned to Government. Equally, it is only a Labour Government that can provide the incentives, assistance and environment that will allow these companies, as well as to the people who work for them, to continue enjoying so much success. I look forward to working with SME 4 Labour to continue developing this essential relationship."

Jonathan Reynolds
MP for Stalybridge and Hyde

Chuka Umunna

MP for Streatham and former Shadow Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills

"The UK's small business are the backbone of the economy and the beating heart of our communities. SME 4 Labour provides a vital forum through which Labour can work in partnership with SMEs, trade unions and workers to build effective policy and stronger relationships with the business community."

Seema Malhotra

MP for Feltham and Heston

"I would like to congratulate SME 4 Labour for all the amazing work that they do in championing small businesses in the Labour Party. SMEs play a vital role in local communities in promoting cohesion and also strongly support the economy. SME 4 Labour provides a powerful voice for business in shaping Labour policies through the partnership that it brings, and I wish it all the very best for the future."

Dan Jarvis

MP for Barnsley Central

"99% of the businesses in our country are small and medium-sized enterprises. Our economy depends on the success of these businesses. It is incredibly important that Labour, the party of work, has a strong relationship with small business and the work of SME 4 Labour is vital to foster and strengthen those relationships."

Chi Onwurah

MP Newcastle Upon Tyne Central

"SMEs are vital to our economy, making up 99.2% of all private sector businesses in the U.K. and employing 14.4 million people. With such a large portion of the population being connected to SMEs, it is essential that the needs of SMEs are met in Parliament. "The Labour party has long been a supporter of small and medium size enterprises. These businesses are active contributors to our society and directly impact so many lives in the UK. They are the lifeblood of the economy, accounting for almost half of private sector turnover. They are key innovators and their success is fundamental to achieving the jobs and growth we all desperately need to see back in our economy. "In Government, the Tories have stifled SMEs with their damaging austerity agenda, taking demand out of the economy and stripping the wealth of our communities. SMEs cannot flourish without the support of Government – something the Tories have failed to do. Labour will unite with SMEs to fight for a healthier economy and I'm grateful for the work of SME4Labour in connecting small and medium businesses with our party."

"It is essential that the Labour Party is a strong voice for SMEs across Britain as they contribute to the essential foundation on which our economic success relies. Over 14 million people are working day in day out in our SMEs to keep Britain on track on a road towards prosperity. At this time of critical uncertainty following the Brexit vote, it's important that Labour is ensuring that the interests of SMEs are at the forefront of our industrial policy, and not just the voices of the biggest companies. Having run a small business myself, I know the challenges this can bring, and SME 4 Labour is a great opportunity to be an essential link with this huge economic community that is the lifeblood of Britain's future success."

Geraint Davies MP

Bill Esterson

MP and Shadow Minister for Business and Enterprise

"There are 5 million businesses who employ fewer than 10 people in this country. These are the backbone of our country and at the heart of our economy and community and we want them to do well. The work of SME 4 Labour means that these small business owners know that we are on their side in the fight for fairness and decent opportunity."

Jon Cruddas

MP Dagenham and Rainham

"I am incredibly impressed with the work of SME 4 labour. Its objective is to strengthen relations between small and medium enterprises and self-employed businesses and the Labour Party. It is vital work in the task at hand to rebuild labour and I very much look forward to working with them in the years ahead."

Lord Kinnock

"SMEs are obviously vital to the wellbeing of the economy and the communities which they serve. With post-Brexit uncertainty and the pressures that currency instability impose, it is more essential than ever for SME4Labour to be active in efforts to ensure that its Labour supporters inside and outside Parliament and local Councils promote and protect the interests of SMEs."

Lord Harrison

"Labour is now the Party championing small businesses. The Tories have neglected the problems of small firms, like sources of funding, over-regulation and late payment on commercial debt. It is time for Labour to take over and give hope to struggling small businesses!"

Lord Triesman

Former Minister for Innovation, Universities and Skills

"No government with a modern economy can avoid forming a deep strategic understanding of SMEs. In part it is because they often create the innovations and employment opportunities on which we depend, in part as indispensable links in the supply chains of top tier production. So we had best give them serious attention or we will end up with a defective industrial strategy."

Rt Hon Lord George Robertson

KT GCMG. NED Western Ferries (Clyde) Ltd and the Royal Edinburgh Military Tattoo. Former NED with Cable and Wireless plc, and Weir Group plc.

"Having made the transition from political high office to the commercial sector, and now serving on the Boards of small and medium sized companies, I can vouch for their importance and their essential role in the UK economy. No political party can ignore the health and prosperity of this crucial sector and Labour will naturally make it a particular priority."

Supporting a Fundraising Dinner with Carwyn Jones, First Secretary of Wales

SME4Labour has actively engaged with CLP's and groups supporting the Labour cause throughout the year. As part of our work to support our friends from across the country, we have supported a fundraising dinner with Carwyn Jones. Tim Roache of GMB and many other colleagues were also present at the dinner.

Yvette Cooper at SME4Labour

September 2015 saw the start of SME 4 Labour's events with the organisation's hosting Yvette Cooper. MPs, volunteers and business owning non-party members gathered in North London for a fundraising dinner. The fundraising dinner enabled Yvette to speak out on pressing matters, such as the refugee crisis where she criticised the then Prime Minister David Cameron for his lack of action on taking a 'fair share' of refugees. Yvette Cooper stressed the importance of small and medium enterprises for British economy.

Book Launch with Peter Hain

"Back to the Future of Socialism"

October 2015, SME 4 Labour along with Stephen Kinnock MP held a discussion with Rt Hon Lord Hain about life in British politics and the success of Lord Hain's book Back to the Future of Socialism. The book highlights what the future holds for the Labour Party and its members putting forward a profound alternative to the neo-liberal economic agenda. Lord Hain is best known for being a prominent activist in the anti-apartheid campaign in South Africa during the 1970s and for his later role in the Northern Ireland peace process. Having served the Labour Party for 50 years and been a cabinet member under both Tony Blair and Gordon Brown, Lord Hain is a true advocate for carrying through the policies brought in by the Labour Party.

Networking Reception in Parliament

November 2015, saw the first networking reception for SME4Labour which led to its widely anticipated official launch in Parliament the following January. Hosted by Bill Esterson MP (and Shadow Minister for small businesses), the event was well attended by 50 MPs and Councillors. With the queue reaching over 400 individuals, SMEs make up 50% of the national economy with a majority of them being Labour-leaning a fact which only reinforces the need for SME4Labour.

The event started with an opening speech from the Co-founder of SME4Labour, Ibrahim Dogus, who highlighted what the group stands for. This was reinforced with a speech from the Leader of the Labour Party, Jeremy Corbyn where he stated "the formation of this group, within the labour party, is a very important step forward" and that SMEs "need to have equal access to all the benefits of the welfare state and business system.

Angela Eagle MP, expressed that a healthy relationship between the Labour Party and SMEs is essential because they "craft our policies so that we can build a prosperous economy for the 21st Century".

Sadiq Khan Fundraiser

April 2016, another successful event held by SME 4 Labour was a fundraising dinner in partnership with labour Labour in cities in support of Sadiq Khan, Labour candidate for London Mayor. Attendees had the opportunity to participate in a raffle and auction which included some excellent prizes.

The Mayoral elections could not have come at a more crucial time for businesses as the economy is suffering from uncertainty and international pressures. With London being such a cosmopolitan city, it was vital that a Mayor, who vows to ease the challenges faced by businesses (including growing competition), was elected. Rightly so, Sadiq Khan won the elections and has taken office in City Hall to fulfil the promises in his manifesto.

We, at SME 4 Labour, look forward to a successful tenure making a better, fairer, more business friendly London.

Meeting between Emily Thornberry MP and SME Owners

April 2016, SME4labour organised a meeting in Islington between SME owners and Emily Thornberry MP.

There were SME owners from various backgrounds who raised their concerns and other issues while also advocating for the Labour Party to become the natural home of small businesses, and that it should do more to engage with them.

The key issues raised were lending to small business, immigration issues for the workforce, high rents and business rates.

SME 4 Labour Policy Roundtable

May 2016, SME4Labour held its first policy roundtable in May this year at the Labour Party headquarters. The meeting room was full to capacity with small business owners, start-ups and freelancers.

It was chaired by Stephen Kinnock MP and attended by the Shadow Secretary for Business, Innovation and Skills, Angela Eagle MP, the Shadow Minister for Small Business, Bill Esterson MP and the Shadow Chief Secretary to the Treasury, Seema Malhotra MP. Also in attendance were representatives from the Cooperative Party and the Institute for the Self-Employed.

The event was also notable as Angela Eagle outlined the new Labour is Listening campaign, which is introducing new ways of engaging with the SME community through social media. SME4Labour applauds this campaign and looks forward to continuing to engage with it.

The policies considered during the event focussed on the following areas:

- Central and local procurement, good and bad regulation
- Banking and finance
- Pensions
- Infrastructure and broadband
- Recruitment and retainment
- Skills and training
- Business ethics
- Innovation and empowerment

The Next Generation of Entrepreneurs

November 2016, The event was chaired by Martin Howe of the Executive Committee for SME 4 Labour with keynote speakers Stephen Timms MP for East Ham and Bill Esterson MP for Sefton Central at Portcullis House.

Stephen Timms MP began by praising the work of SME 4 Labour. He stated that the current government setup does not appear to support SMEs in the way that it should, and that is a political opportunity for Labour. He argued that the tax system needs to better reflect the needs of people who set up businesses for themselves and that this was an agenda Labour needs to get right.

Bill Esterson MP agreed that SMEs provide opportunities for criticism of government policy, and argued that on the topic of Brexit, business confidence is essential for success. He said that the loss of long-term foreign investment into the country will cause increasing problems over time. He added that the result with Nissan is a good step, but that it is an isolated success with one company in one part of the country and that definitely is not the same as a plan.

He argued that the government target of creating 3 million apprenticeships is dangerous and that a rush to introduce this scheme will mean that there will be a loss of quality. He also stated that projections suggest there will be a deficit of 0.5m jobs in the intermediate and advanced-skilled areas including the construction sector.

We are Community. The modern union for a changing world.

We're pleased to support SME4Labour to help create a growing economy and a better working world.

Our members come from all industries and walks of life, but they have one thing in common—they all want to get on at work, and to do right by their families. We're helping them reach their goals.

We recognise the world of work has changed so we have changed too. We still represent workers in traditional industries but we are reaching out to new members, including self-employed workers, supporting people in emerging sectors of our changing economy.
